

Viewpoints

If teachers are using AI to help grade student work, who's grading the AI?

If teachers are using AI to help grade student work, who's grading the AI? This is an important question for educators, students, family members and more. California has issued guidance for how educators can use AI, but there is little to no mention of how teachers should treat AI that grades assignments. While the California Department of Education's guidance on AI is tailored for educators, parents and others may also benefit from reviewing the language, linked here:

Increasingly, "California school districts are signing contracts for artificial intelligence tools, from automated grading in San Diego to chatbots in central California, Los Angeles, and the San Francisco Bay Area."

calmatters.org/...

Professionals

Damon Fournier

Associate

Los Angeles

323.330.6837

dfournier@f3law.com