Namita Brown Discusses Federal Funding Freeze on ACSA Legislative Lunch Break

Managing Partner Namita Brown recently participated in a crucial episode of the ACSA Legislative Lunch Break. Alongside Hosts Naj Alikhan and guest Linda Jacobson from The 74, Namita provided legal analysis on the Trump administration's decision to freeze $800 million in federal funding set for California schools.

This significant funding impacts vital programs, including teacher training, after-school initiatives, migrant education, and more across the state. During the segment, Namita helped dissect the complex legal implications of this funding hold and discussed its potential ramifications for school districts throughout California.

F3 Law remains at the forefront of understanding and addressing the legal challenges impacting public education. Namita's participation in this key conversation really highlights our firm's dedication to keeping California's educators informed and supported, especially when navigating tough legislative and financial situations.
