What can I solve for you?

In my diverse practice, I handle an array of matters for clients, with a focus on defending school districts when disputes arise and counseling them on labor and employment issues to help avoid litigation from occurring. I also advise on a wide range of issues in the fast-paced and ever-evolving matters area.

What's it like to work with me?

As the son of a highly regarded teacher, I came to this area of the law with an understanding of many of the issues education professionals encounter as well as a deep respect for public education. I'm a huge advocate for school districts. Clients value my integrity, legal knowledge and the ability to apply it effectively and interpersonal communication skills. I also take pride in always treating people and situations fairly.

Overview

In serving the needs of public school districts, Art Garcia addresses a wide spectrum of matters in both the litigation and labor and employment arenas. Art helps clients with disputes involving Title XI, personal injury, safety liability and other areas. Drawing on his strong research and writing skills, he drafts responses to due process complaints and case analysis and chronology reports regarding compliance with various statutes and regulations.

Art also helps with discipline proceedings and writes notices of suspension and termination, deposition and hearing summaries, grievance responses, answers to complaints, interrogatories, and responses to Public Records Act requests. Additionally, he conducts personnel investigations.

In all of his service to clients, Art pays close attention to the details of a matter while also working as efficiently as possible, and he knows how to distill and convey complex concepts into easy-to-understand language, both verbally and in writing.

Before pursuing a career in the legal profession, Art worked in a wide variety of occupations—from construction to landscaping to maintenance, among others—and he also served in managerial roles, where he learned how to lead people collaboratively to accomplish a common goal. This diverse experience enhances his ability to problem-solve and guide others to attain the most optimal outcomes.

After School

I enjoy spending time with my family, working out, cooking and watching baseball, especially the Los Angeles Dodgers, football, basketball and soccer.
