What can I solve for you?

I am dedicated to serving my public education clients, representing them in student and special education matters. I provide knowledgeable counsel, to help them avoid future legal problems. I work hard to help ease their legal concerns, so they can focus on providing California's students a quality education.

What's it like to work with me?

I enjoy working with district personnel to understand their legal needs. I listen carefully and gather information before proposing resolutions. My clients appreciate my analytical and practical approach to problem solving as well as my focus on avoiding future issues.

I am passionate about education, and I am honored to help California's public schools achieve their missions.

Overview

Becky Vaughan is an associate in our Oakland office where she works with school districts statewide handling a range of special education and student issues. She adeptly represents her clients in settlement negotiations, due process hearings, and in Office for Civil Rights and California Department of Education complaint investigations. She also guides clients in fulfilling their duties under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, and related California laws and regulations.

Prior to law school, Becky had a career in technology, managing product development teams. During that time, she honed her skills of developing customer relationships, working collaboratively to achieve goals, negotiating mutually beneficial outcomes, and training work groups.

Becky has spent a lot of time in California schools volunteer teaching and coaching girls lacrosse. She believes each child is entitled to a quality education and is proud to support California's public schools in achieving their missions.
